Manhunt ends in Moncton

Suspect in custody.
Witness says alleged cop-killer, 24, declared 'I'm done' before arrest

A nerve-wracking manhunt came to an end early Friday morning after police apprehended the suspect wanted in one of the worst mass shootings in the RCMP's history, which left three Mounties dead and two others wounded in Moncton, N.B.

Paul Greene, a spokesman with the RCMP, said Justin Bourque was arrested at around 12:10 a.m. local time, bringing to a close a harrowing search that lasted nearly 30 hours.

Bourque, 24, was wanted after the shootings Wednesday evening in the northwest area of the city.

Michelle Thibodeau said she saw the Moncton man arrested in the front yard of her home.

"I'm still shaking," said Thibodeau, 21.

She said she heard the suspect say, "I'm done," prior to his arrest as officers had their guns drawn.

Moncton, a city of about 69,000, had been at a virtual standstill up until the arrest, with buses pulled off the roads, government buildings shut down and schools closed as RCMP scoured the streets.

Residents in a cordoned-off area were told to stay inside their homes and lock their doors.

But shortly after Bourque's arrest, people were allowed outside and roads that had been blockaded for more than a day were reopened, Greene said.

Police, including tactical officers, began their manhunt Wednesday at around 7:30 p.m. when they responded to a call about a man walking along a road with what was believed to be a gun.

After the call, shots were fired and officers called for backup.

RCMP said police officers from across the country were brought in to help arrest the suspect.

Bourque was seen at one point Thursday morning, but officers were unable to arrest him after he went into a wooded area, the RCMP said.

The identities of the officers who were shot have not been released by police.

However, late Thursday the National Post identified one of the slain officers as Const. Dave Ross, a police services dog handler with the RCMP. The newspaper quoted the sister-in-law of the man's wife as saying he had a young son, with another child expected in September.

The RCMP scheduled a news conference for Friday at 8 a.m.

Bourque was not known to police, and investigators were trying to piece together his background.

He was wearing military camouflage and carrying two rifles in a picture of him released by police on Twitter on Wednesday night.

The deadly shootings touched a nerve not only in Moncton but throughout the country, where flags were flown at half-mast, including the flag at the Peace Tower in Ottawa. MPs also observed a moment of silence in the House of Commons.

Group of Seven painting

Correction

A headline that appeared in a June 5 story about an alleged Group of Seven painting incorrectly stated that Vancouver Art Gallery senior curator Ian Thom called the piece a fraud. In fact, the curator said he did not believe the art was an authentic Lawren Harris painting.

Police watchdog investigating Taser death

A man has died after he was Tasered by police following a report he had broken into a Burnaby apartment building Wednesday afternoon.

B.C.'s police watchdog is investigating the incident that unfolded shortly before 3:30 p.m., when Burnaby RCMP officers responded to a complaint of a man who had broken through a plate-glass door into an apartment building on Walker Avenue.

Police at the scene said the man was aggressive and would not comply with their commands, and a Taser was used, according to the Independent Investigations Office.

Officers said the Taser did not work to subdue the man, and a physical struggled ensued.

While the man was being taken into custody, he became unresponsive and was pronounced dead at the scene, according to the IIO.

The man has not yet been identified.

House raid linked to 'No Pipelines' graffiti

East Vancouver. Blogger denounces search as police 'intimidation tactic' to silence opposition to pipes and tankers

Police have confirmed they raided an East Vancouver house in an investigation connected to the prevalent "No Pipelines" graffiti after a blog post surfaced questioning the magnitude of force used during the Tuesday morning search.

Four residents of the house and one guest had guns pointed at them and were handcuffed and locked up in a police transport van during a raid by about 16 officers and a K-9 squad, said Gord Hill, a resident and editor of the Warrior Publications website.

Considering the charges were of a "minor nature" — mischief under $5,000 — Hill questioned the size of the raid searching for "graffiti vandalism paraphernalia." Five laptops, USB keys, four cellphones, banners, a video camera and a black hoodie were seized.

"I think it's an intimidation tactic to try to silence the opposition to oil and gas pipelines and tankers that are proposed for our regions here," Hill said, noting the residents are radicals involved in indigenous resistance, communications and anarchist projects.

Vancouver police spokesman Const. Brian Montague confirmed Thursday police had executed a search warrant in an ongoing investigation that is linked to the "No Pipelines" graffiti that has dotted walls, murals and cars across the city.

While he wouldn't provide specific details on tactics, including the number of officers involved and whether firearms were drawn, Montague said search warrants typically involve a number of officers and that drawing a firearm is an option that would be "quite normal" in certain scenarios.

"Searching a home obviously has some potentially dangerous aspects to it when you don't know who was inside and you're dealing with unknowns," he said.

The residents are "entitled to the perception" that the search was too heavy-handed, Montague said.

"If they have concerns about dealings with our officers, they can always make a complaint."

Five people were taken into custody during the search but subsequently released. "No charges have been laid yet," Montague said. As the investigation is ongoing, he could not provide any additional details.

As for the residents, they're organizing a legal defence and fundraising for new electronics.

Friday the 13th. Mounties prepared to quash full moon party at nude beach

Nighttime revelers planning on attending a full moon party at Wreck Beach on Friday the 13th will be stopped by Mounties.

An anonymous source alerted the University of British Columbia RCMP detachment to the party, prompting police to station a dedicated presence at the top of the trailhead that night, spokesman Sgt. Drew Grainger said Thursday.

While it's just speculation that Vancouver's infamous nude beach is the site of the party, which more than 7,400 people plan to attend according to the event's Facebook page, police will be there just in case to prevent a rave.

"The park is closed — it's closed for a reason," Grainger said. "There's obviously a noise issue. There's also a potential for fire risk if people are down there in the evening and on top of that it's extremely treacherous terrain when there's no light."

Just last week, a woman had to be rescued by emergency services when she fell down an embankment at night, Grainger added. There is a $500 fine for being in a Metro Vancouver park after its closed. Wreck Beach closes at sunset.

The planned enforcement of the party comes in a year where the RCMP plan to step up its presence at the beach, much to the chagrin of the nudist community.

But after a few weekends down at the beach, police are learning what is best for the community, Grainger said.

"We're on the verge of finding a balance to make it safe and enjoyable place, and also a lawful place."

Going green. Study finds competition has influence on green behaviour

It turns out people may actually go green out of envy, according to a new study from the University of B.C. that found a little friendly rivalry goes a long way in encouraging environmentally friendly behaviour.

A researcher in UBC's Sauder School of Business, working with researchers at the University of Western Ontario and the University of Alberta, found that when people see groups they consider competitors making an effort to compost or recycle, they're more likely to do the same.

When people saw their friends being more eco-conscious, however, it didn't make a difference, researchers found.

For the study, researchers analyzed the composting behaviour of a group of business students in a crowded café. They first asked the students about their feelings towards students from other departments, like engineering and computer science.

When the business students were told that students in their own program were composting, researchers found the students didn't make an extra effort to toss their coffee cups in the compost bin.

The dawning of the new age of Aquarium

$45M renovation. The Vancouver Aquarium's new design echoes its new approach to leaning and conservation

MATT KIELTYKA
matt.kieltyka@metronews.ca

Like a pearl sitting pretty in the centre of an oyster, a 14-foot glowing globe highlighting the world's oceans will greet visitors to the renovated Vancouver Aquarium when it opens June 13.

Surrounding it in the expansive round Teck Connections Gallery are high-resolution 360-degree video monitors, exposed wood beams and brushed concrete amid a neutral grey colour scheme.

Illuminated aquatic tanks at each portal offer a peek of what's in store down the branching halls leading to the existing exhibits.

After a $45 million renovation, the new 55,000 square foot entrance complex — the first of three modernization phases at the 58-year-old aquarium — offers quite a first impression.

"We wanted to stretch the experience out," said John Nightingale, president and CEO of the Vancouver Aquarium. "In the old space, you had to fight your way through ticketing and were dumped into the experience. We wanted to give people a chance to talk to each other."

The modern, open space is the beginning, middle and end of the aquarium experience, serving as a gallery and educational space as well as a hub that connects the aquarium's arctic, B.C. coast, Canadian Pacific and tropical exhibits.

The 21st Century design echoes its new approach to learning and conservation.

"We do a lot of education, but we really don't care that our visitors leave educated in the fifth grade sense," said Nightingale.

"We care that they leave curious, interested and motivated to do something. It's a much more integrated experience involving sense, conversation and learning new things, principally through stories," he said.

That includes tackling sensitive issues head-on.

The Vancouver Aquarium has been in the news for different reasons this year, as park board commissioners, the city's mayor and even world-renowned conservationist Jane Goodall challenged its cetacean captivity policy.

The aquarium has a standing offer to Goodall for a visit at the facility and to speak with staff.

"I've known Jane for a number of years and I understand her concern and frustration. It's her personal feelings based on her lifetime of work," said Nightingale.

Even with renovations going on, the aquarium has broken the million visitor mark in each of the past two years. Phase two and three of the plan will continue with the aquarium remaining open until final completion in 2020.

‘We want everyone to be Italian for the day.’

Italian Day returns to Commercial Drive

Commercial Drive will embrace its heritage this weekend during the traditional Italian Day festival.

Dubbed Made In Italy, this year’s event focuses on Italian creations as well as bits of Italy in Vancouver.

“When I spoke to people who lived here in the ’50s and ’60s, everybody tells me stories about this area, it’s so important to recognize the Italian heart in Vancouver,” said Beppe De Lucio, the president of the Italian Day Festival Society.

“We want everyone to be Italian for the day.”

The festival returned in 2010 — after a hiatus since the late 1980s — and hit 300,000 attendants in 2013, a record amount.

De Luccio says the importance of the festival is not in the festivities but recognizing a part of Canadian culture that was ignored for so long.

“It was the sense of the large population who emigrated from Italy that they had a chance to celebrate their fathers and forefathers for everything they’ve done not only for them but for the city of Vancouver,” he said.

The festival will feature a walk-through museum featuring Italian inventions — such as the bicycle, eyeglasses, radio and telephone — as well as vendors and musicians.

There will be a raffle, with the winner receiving a trip for two to anywhere in Italy. Part of the proceeds of the raffle will go to funding the Templeton High School’s “Summervisions Film Institute for Youth.”

The festival starts at noon along Commercial Drive and runs until 8 p.m.

In the name of science, clip those toenails!

Yuck factor. A UBC professor was part of a team in Atlantic Canada that conducted research using toenails

thandi.fletcher@metronews.ca

When health geographer Trevor Dummer tells people about his research, the reaction is often the same: “Yuck.”

That’s because Dummer’s work involves analyzing an unusual specimen: toenail clippings.

Now an associate professor in UBC’s School of Population and Public Health, Dummer was part of the Dalhousie University team that helped assemble the world’s largest collection of toenail clippings for the Atlantic Partnership for Tomorrow’s Health project.

For their research, the scientists recruited toenail clippings from 35,000 people living in the Atlantic Provinces, whose health will continue to be tracked over the next 25 years.

Toenail clippings may seem like an unpleasant specimen to study, but Dummer said he quickly got over the gross factor.

“We selected toenails because they’re a really good indicator of long-term exposure to things that potentially aren’t very good for us, like heavy metals,” said Dummer.

Toenails are preferable to fingernails because they are more covered up, he said, so they aren’t exposed to other environmental factors.

At Dalhousie, Dummer said his team analyzed about 3,000 toenail clippings to determine the link between arsenic exposure in well water and arsenic levels that accumulate in the body. Arsenic, which is a heavy metal, tends to accumulate and get stored in toenails, said Dummer. It is also a known carcinogenic, according to the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

UBC health geographer Trevor Dummer is analyzing toenail clippings to study the relationship between the environment and health. CONTRIBUTED

Now Dummer is bringing his research to B.C., using the analyzed data from Dalhousie to compare it to the health of B.C. residents.

“What we want to start doing is comparing health outcomes between people from B.C. in terms of how they compare with people in Atlantic Canada,” he said.

Seattle shooter kills one

Campus shooting. Student disarms lone gunman in school building after he fatally wounds 19-year-old man, injures three others

A lone gunman armed with a shotgun opened fire Thursday in a building at a small Seattle university, fatally wounding one person before a student subdued him with pepper spray as he tried to reload, Seattle police said.

A student building monitor at Seattle Pacific University disarmed the gunman after he entered the foyer at Otto Miller Hall. Several other students jumped on top of him and pinned him down until police officers arrived, police said.

A 19-year-old man died at Harborview Medical Center. Three other people were injured. A critically injured 20-year-old woman was taken to surgery, hospital spokeswoman Susan Gregg said. A 24-year-old man and a 22-year-old man were in satisfactory condition.

Police said they had arrested one man.

None of the four who were brought to the hospital was the arrested man, Gregg said. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Nigeria. Boko Haram extremists massacre 200 villagers, witnesses say

Boko Haram militants dressed as soldiers killed at least 200 civilians in three villages in northeastern Nigeria and the military failed to intervene even though it was warned that an attack was imminent, witnesses said on Thursday.

A community leader who witnessed the killings on Monday said residents of the Gwoza local government district in Borno state had pleaded for the military to send soldiers after they heard that militants were about to attack.

"We all thought they were the soldiers that we earlier reported to that the insurgents might attack us," said a community leader who escaped.

The militants arrived in Toyota Hilux pickup trucks, commonly used by the military, and said they were soldiers. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Moncton manhunt causes Saskatchewan man to relive 'nightmare' RCMP shooting

Flashback. Situation in N.B. causes farmer to recall the time he helped convince a man who killed two Mounties to turn himself in

The manhunt for a suspect in the killing of three New Brunswick RCMP officers takes Armand Smith back to a "nightmare" eight years ago.

In July 2006, the Saskatchewan farmer and his wife Rose helped convince a man responsible for killing two Mounties near Spiritwood to turn himself in.

Curtis Dagenais used a high-powered rifle to gun down constables Robin Cameron and Marc Bourdages after a dusty car chase down some country roads.

Dagenais escaped the scene on foot.

Quoted

"I really didn't want to go through that again. It was a long day.... It was a nightmare."

Armand Smith

Like the situation in Moncton, N.B., where police hunted suspected gunman Justin Bourque before arresting him early Friday, Saskatchewan RCMP set up a perimeter around a large area where they thought Dagenais was.

About 250 officers spent 11 days looking through farmland and bush. Vehicles were stopped at roadblocks. Trunks and truck beds were searched.

It turned out that Dagenais had been hiding well outside of the area.

Smith and his wife found Dagenais in their hay field.

The couple took him in for coffee and eventually convinced him that surrendering was the right thing to do.

Dagenais was convicted of two counts of first-degree murder and sentenced to life in prison.

To this day, Smith is grateful that he didn't go out to the field by himself.

"I was just happy as all get out that my wife took me out to the field," he said. "Between the two of us we slowly talked the guy into turning himself in.

"My wife and I just said it was probably the longest day we ever did trying to talk the fella into turning himself in. I really didn't want to go through that again. It was a long day.... It was a nightmare." THE CANADIAN PRESS

'I just want this to be over.' Affected locals 'taking no chances' as they holed up in their homes until suspect was apprehended

HALEY RYAN
Metro in Halifax

Will Njoku said, via Twitter, "I just want this to be over," as he and hundreds of residents waited for police to find the man suspected of having shot and killed three RCMP officers.

Njoku spoke with media outlets from his home in Moncton following the shooting Wednesday night, sharing his experience as helicopters flew overhead and police searched the neighbourhood for any sign of the gunman.

"I just want this to be over for all of us.... Worried for my neighbors," Njoku tweeted Wednesday.

Heavily armed RCMP officers searched through the night for Justin Bourque, 24, whom they caught early Friday.

Police had asked residents in a large section of the city to remain indoors until the suspect was found.

Around 11:30 a.m. Thursday, Njoku said via Twitter he and his family had spent the night in their basement, then moved upstairs and locked themselves in a bathroom.

"Taking no chances," he tweeted.

In an email to Metro, Njoku said he would not speak with media outlets until his family is safe.

A former Yarmouth County woman living in Moncton was also on lockdown, and said there will forever be a sense of "innocence lost" in the city her family calls home.

Audrey Vaughan, who lives in Moncton with her husband, Jim, and their son Jimmy told the Yarmouth Vanguard Thursday morning no one had gotten much sleep.

"There's just so many little patches of wooded areas and green space, and (Bourque) knows the area, he's from here. Any little noise and you're looking out the window," she said.

Vaughan said it's incredibly sad to think about the RCMP officers who died in the line of duty, and her heart "just broke" thinking of the families and fellow Mounties who had to continue the search.

Vaughan said Moncton is "just not going to look the same again."

"That's the hard part. He's taken away something from all of us," she said.

WITH FILES FROM THE YARMOUTH COUNTY VANGUARD

Bourque's radical remake

'There was a pretty stark difference'

Two stark and contrasting portraits are emerging of the man suspected of killing three Mounties and injuring two others in a heavily armed rampage Wednesday night.

One was the highly intelligent, laid-back guitar enthusiast known to friends who grew up alongside 24-year-old Justin Bourque in suburban Moncton.

The other was a radical, angry remake of a man obsessed with gun rights, angered by police and fixated on global conflicts going on half a world away.

"It was almost like a complete 180 for him," friend and former workmate Trever Finck said. "There was a pretty stark difference."

The new Bourque — the one dressed head-to-toe in army fatigues and toting two high-powered guns — became the subject of an intense police manhunt that ended in his arrest early Friday.

Those who know Bourque are not particularly surprised that he evaded his hunters so long. One acquaintance who spoke to Torstar on condition of anonymity described Bourque as someone with "lots of tactical knowledge."

Bourque has had a long enthusiasm for guns, and even before Wednesday night's shooting was often seen dressed in camouflage military fatigues.

He, like others, is shocked by what Bourque is alleged to have done. Up until now, he had left the impression of a nice, friendly guy.

"Nobody expected this."

Pepper the robot shakes on the kawaii

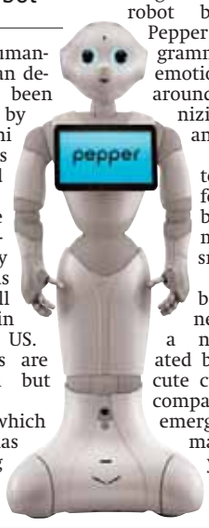
Will sell for $1,900 US. Japanese billionaire kicked the 'kawaii,' or cute culture, up a notch with humanoid robot

A cooing, gesturing humanoid on wheels that can decipher emotions has been unveiled in Japan by billionaire Masayoshi Son who says robots should be tender and make people smile.

Son's mobile phone company Softbank said Thursday that the robot it has dubbed Pepper will go on sale in Japan in February for $1,900 US. Overseas sales plans are under consideration but undecided.

The machine, which has no legs, but has gently gesticulating hands appeared on a stage in a Tokyo suburb, cooing and humming. It dramatically touched hands with Son in a Genesis or E.T. moment.

Son, who told the crowd that his longtime dream was to go into the personal robot business, said Pepper has been programmed to read the emotions of people around it by recognizing expressions and voice tones.



"Our aim is to develop affectionate robots that can make people smile," he said.

Cuddly robots are not new in Japan, a nation dominated by "kawaii," or cute culture, but no companion robot has emerged a major market success yet.

Greece. Getting Google Street View is a 'godsend'

Google launched its Street View map service in Greece on Thursday after winning approval from the country's privacy authority, which had blocked the ground-level map application five years ago.

Company officials said the service went live after "extensive and detailed" negotiations with the country's Data Protection Authority, which last year lifted objections made to the project in 2009.

Culture Minister Panos Panagiotopoulos attended a launch event in Athens and said the map service would help the crisis-hit country's vital tourism industry, describing Greece as an "endless archaeological park."

"We have so much to show off. This is a godsend," he said. "Everyone knows how difficult things are, with all the obstacles that are there when dealing with the Greek state. We are trying to overcome these difficulties."

Google was allowed to gather photos for Street View while waiting for formal approval to start the service in Greece, the 56th country where it is now available. The company also had been permitted to display cultural sites on a related service.

1 Eugenie Bouchard. Canada has fallen in love with this 20-year-old from Quebec, who lost a hard-fought battle in the French Open semis against Maria Sharapova — the second straight Grand Slam she's advanced this far. Bouchard is a social media darling with more than 500,000 fans on Facebook and 150,000 on Twitter, and even tweeted a picture of herself with Owen Wilson at Roland Garros. A star is born.

2 William Shatner. In an announcement made on YouTube, the iconic actor was named as parade marshal for this year's Calgary Stampede. Previous marshals have included Chris Hadfield and Rick Hansen. The Stampede takes place July 4, and I'm hoping to find a teleportation machine to beam myself there so I can see Captain Kirk in person.

3 Movember. The Movember Foundation has launched the Canadian Men's Health and Wellbeing Innovation Challenge. This grassroots funding opportunity allows Canadians to submit innovative ideas regarding men's health — and help men take action with their health. Deadline is June 26. Go to movember.com for details.

4 Game of Thrones Finale Theatric. HBO Canada and Cineplex have teamed up to offer Game of Thrones fans quite the treat: In 29 select theatres across Ontario, Quebec and Atlantic Canada, fans can watch the Season 4 finale June 15 at 9 p.m. on the big screen with fellow diehards. There were a lot of OMGs when this news broke on social media.

5 Denim vs. Active Wear. According to new data, sales of jeans in Canada have been on a long-term decline, partly due to the popularity of activewear. Seems "active bottoms" haven't been this hot since '80s leg warmers. I'm going to start wearing leg warmers over Lululemon yoga pants while working out to Jennifer Beals dancing to Flashdance ... What a Feeling.

6 Malcolm Gladwell. The bestselling N.Y.C.-based author (Outliers, The Tipping Point), did an Ask Me Anything this week as part of Reddit's popular AMA series. Gladwell was full of compliments for Canada, the country where he was raised — in Elmira, Ont. — and received an Order of Canada, saying, "Canadians are the nicest people in the world. Hands down." Ah geez, thanks.

7 WestJet. They've done it again, with another viral video. In this tear-jerker, it shows an amazing early Father's Day gift they gave to a hard-working dad, Marc Grimard from Saskatoon. They surprised Marc by flying him to Edmonton to visit his sick child, Joel, who has a congenital heart condition and is staying at a Ronald McDonald House there with his mother. Beautiful and touching vid.

8 #HatzOnCatz. The hashtag went viral after teen social media star Matthew Espinosa asked his fans to send him #HatzOnCatz photos for a contest. Soon enough, people from around the world were sending silly and cute cat-in-the-hat photos. Heck, I almost bought a kitty and Tilley hat just to be part of this. But my Maltese shih tzu, Roxy, nixed that. #HatzOnDogz, she says.

2,000+ attempt Guinness record for World Environment Day

More than 2,000 people, mostly students wearing their school uniforms, gathered in Nepal's capital on Thursday in a bid to set a world record for the largest collective tree-hugging event.

Parliament members, office workers and even Buddhist monks also took part in the attempt, joining the students at a park on the outskirts of Kathmandu.

The dog days are coming

REBECCA WILLIAMS

Let's celebrate the glorious day that is Friday.

You're almost there, free of your desk, never-ending emails and the dreaded copy machine. The world — or weekend — is your oyster. Head to the beach! Run around, get sand stuck in your paws and let your tail wag.

Wait, that's just this dog.

Well, take a cue from Ellie the Great Dane anyway, and let loose! Feel the wind in your fur, or rather, hair.

Time gets set to Cruise control

Reel Guys

RICHARD CROUSE AND MARK BRESLIN

Emily Blunt and Tom Cruise star in the time-travelling sci-fi thriller Edge of Tomorrow. CONTRIBUTED

Synopsis

Set at the height of a worldwide battle between the human race and seemingly indestructible aliens called Mimics, Tom Cruise plays William Cage, a marketing genius whose ads have inspired millions of people to enlist by telling them the story of hero Rita (Emily Blunt), a legendary warrior with more Mimic notches on her belt than the rest of the army combined. When pressed into combat, something strange happens. Cage gets caught in a time loop, reliving the same day over and over. Eventually he'll learn enough to beat this unbeatable foe. Trouble is, he has to die every day...

Edge of Tomorrow.

Unlike Cruise's character, this mostly entertaining flick doesn't have the ability to re-do its more lacklustre moments

Richard: Mark, two thirds of Edge of Tomorrow is as un-Cruise-like a movie as Tom has ever made. The Groundhog Day been-there, done-that section of the film is inventive, often played for laughs and presents Cruise in a way we've rarely ever seen him — as a coward. It's a refreshing twist for him and gives him a chance to exercise his rarely used comedic chops. You know he's going to turn heroic sooner or later, but it's a blast to see him do something just outside his usual wheelhouse.

Mark: Richard, I enjoyed his cowardly weasel schtick as much as you. I didn't find the Groundhog Day type plot as inventive, though — it's been done in other movies like Source Code and About Time, but the mashup with Starship Troopers was different. The problem I had was that the necessary repetitiveness became inevitably boring after a while, and I felt like I was watching someone slowly get very good at a violent video game.

RC: It does rely a bit too heavily on video game-style violence at the end, but I have to disagree with you on the repetitiveness of the time loop. I thought director Doug Liman figured out clever and entertaining ways to show the same thing over and over, keeping it exciting with interesting editing and changing perspectives. The first two reels are packed with energy and invention. It's only when the conventions that made the story enticing are put aside in the last reel that the movie becomes a standard Cruise action flick. A good Cruise action flick but still more standard than the promising first hour.

MB: Cruise has been in some dogs lately, but this isn't one of them. And normally I would have dismissed the last third as too conventional, but at least it's the only part of the movie that puts Cruise and the viewer on the same level — neither knows what's going to happen next. I just found the time-loop a bit boring, which I also felt in Groundhog Day. What did you think of Emily Blunt?

RC: I'm a fan, but this is something different for her, and for action movies in general. Big budget blockbusters don't usually make room for female characters unless they are sidekicks or girlfriends. Here Blunt avoids being objectified and is as strong, if not stronger than Cruise.

Wolfcop blends the fuzz with the fuzzy

Canadian director playfully shifts shape of werewolf genre.
Wolfcop trailer wows horror fans to win film-financing contest

CHRIS ALEXANDER
scene@metronews.ca

Director Lowell Dean, left, talks to Leo Fafard and Sarah Lind on the set of Wolfcop. CONTRIBUTED

How's this for high concept: Alcoholic cop gets the bite from a beast and turns into a blood-hungry monster during the full moon and ultimately becomes a better officer in the process. That's the bizarre gist of Wolfcop, a riotous Canadian romp from writer/director Lowell Dean, a Saskatchewan-reared filmmaker whose gonzo sensibilities suit the hirsute story sublimely.

"We didn't want to do something derivative," Dean told Metro last week.

"At the same time, we had to make a movie within the constraints of our low budget. So we just tried to think of what we haven't seen on screen in any werewolf movie in a while. The touchstone film for me is An American Werewolf in London and there's plenty of its DNA in Wolfcop."

Certainly, the playful yet gory push and pull that drives Wolfcop hearkens back to John Landis' immortal 1981 classic, but when it comes to Dean's werewolf, the transformation makes Rick Baker's award-winning FX designs seem like mere growing pains. No, when Wolfcop's cursed lawman Lou Garou (Leo Fafard) shifts shape, it's gleefully revolting, with skin splitting, bursting and slipping off to reveal the screaming monster inside. It's wild, sophisticated stuff and even wilder considering the film cost peanuts to produce.

"The film scene was shrinking in Saskatchewan as we had just lost our tax credit," notes the director of Wolfcop's challenged genesis.

"So our question was, how would we do this? The Hobo with a Shotgun trailer was very inspirational for us and like that trailer, our trailer we produced to get financing was more of a scene. Our plan was to use it to try to find rich dentists and what not, and when we came across CineCoup it was too good to be true."

CineCoup is the Cineplex steered national film-financing contest that was almost completely dictated by fan response and an elaborate voting process. And even though many observers of the contest called it for Wolfcop to win, Dean was never completely convinced.

"Even when we were in the top five, I was telling my partners we wouldn't win and just to ride with the amount of press we were getting. I really had no idea."

Wolfcop has been getting international buzz and recently made the cover of Canadian horror bible Rue Morgue. Advance reviews are glowing and many are calling Dean a horror hero. But now that the blood has dried and the film is on the cusp of release, the question begs, what's next Mr. Dean?

"Why, Wolfcop 2, of course!"

Of course.

Dr. Drezillions snaps up $40M mega-mansion, chicken coop and all

If Dr. Dre is looking to downplay reports that he's basically a billionaire now, his latest real estate purchase isn't helping.

The rap mogul has reportedly closed on the $40 million mega-mansion in Brentwood, Calif., previously owned by Gisele Bundchen and Tom Brady, according to E! News. "He's about to close on the house (that he) and his wife, Nicole, purchased," a source says. The 18,700 square-foot estate sits on four acres and has five bedrooms and nine bathrooms, plus a home gym, solar panels and a chicken coop.

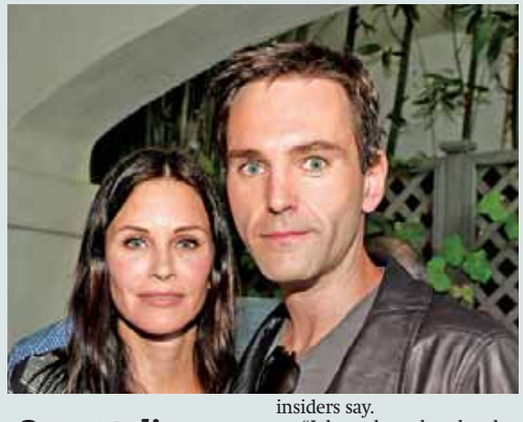
OUR TAKE ON THE WORLD OF CELEBRITIES

The Word



Cox, 49, lives up to... er... in Cougar Town

MELINDA TAUB
Metro World News in New York City

Courteney Cox really does inhabit Cougar Town: The former Friend, 49, is reportedly set to marry Snow Patrol guitarist Johnny McDaid, who's 12 years her junior.

Though the two have been dating for less than a year, things have been going so well that they're discussing getting engaged, insiders say.

"Johnny loves her daughter Coco, and he wants to marry Courteney. They have discussed getting engaged and everyone thinks it is going to happen," a source tells Page Six.

Coco is Cox's 10-year-old daughter with her first husband David Arquette. They were married for 14 years, divorcing in 2013 after a long and rocky separation. Cox and McDaid met through Cox's close friend Jennifer Aniston, who apparently approves of the relationship. "All of Courteney's friends love Johnny, which is great because Jen wasn't so fond of David Arquette," the source says.

Justin Bieber

Justin Bieber's racist skeletons just keep coming out of that old closet

Justin Bieber's past keeps coming back to haunt him, as yet another video has surfaced showing the then-14-year-old singer parodying his One Less Lonely Girl hit by using a racist slur instead, according to the Sun.

Sources say his team has known about the video for years but refused to pay the $500,000 demanded by whoever ended up leaking it.

As is becoming his custom, Bieber was quick to apologize, the second time he's done so for a racist video from his past in less than a week. "Facing my mistakes from years ago has been one of the hardest things I've ever dealt with," he says in the new statement. "But I feel now that I need to take responsibility for those mistakes and not let them linger. ... At the end of the day, I just need to step up and own what I did." He might want to save some of that owning, though, as Page Six reports that there could be "15 to 20 more minutes" of footage of Bieber using racial slurs that have yet to be released, footage that "explicitly shows this was more than just one regrettable joke," a source says. Wonder what the next apology will look like.

Beer born in Ontario

LIQUID ASSETS
Peter Rockwell
@therealwineguy
liquidassets@eastlink.ca

Back in the '80s, Bob and Doug McKenzie turned our appreciation of a cold brew into something as iconically Canadian as playing street hockey or sewing a maple leaf on your backpack.

In this age of innovative craft beer, two other Canucks have taken our liquid history a little more seriously. Alan McLeod and Jordan St. John's new book Ontario Beer: A Heady History of Brewing from the Great Lakes to the Hudson Bay (The History Press, $21.99) is a lovingly researched look back at the life and times of Ontario's vibrant brewing culture.

Finding a beer from that province with national distribution, not made by a big-time brewery, can be tough. While Creemore Springs' Premium Lager (473 ml, $2.85 - $3.99) may be part of the Molson family, it's kept its regional personality with a shot of malt and light hops. It's well-rounded and session worthy (meaning you can enjoy a few in one sitting).

It's a great barbecue beer, meeting sweet and savoury flavours somewhere right in the middle.

When in doubt, wrap your app in prosciutto

Baked Prosciutto-Wrapped Jalapeno Poppers. There is a simple way to slim down these traditionally fat-laden bites

This recipe serves six. MATTHEW MEAD/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Standard jalapeno poppers are thumb-sized hot peppers stuffed with cream cheese and cheddar cheese, then breaded and deep-fried. Yummy, but most home cooks aren't too excited for the mess of deep-frying. That's why there also is a baked version — half a jalapeno stuffed with cheese and wrapped in bacon.

Both types are delicious, but neither is all that healthy. So this version delivers gratification without overdoing it.

From a culinary point of view, jalapeno poppers make complete sense. Nothing tames a chili's heat like dairy.

That's why so many cultures serve their fiery entrées with dairy as a side dish. Mexicans team up spicy tortillas with crema. Indians serve hot curries with yogurt-based raita. And that's why cheese is right at home in a jalapeno popper. But it doesn't have to be high-fat cheese. The fresh goat cheese in this recipe delivers the required creaminess, while a modest amount of Parmigiano-Reggiano delivers the required flavour.

Brighten up the filling with scallions and lemon zest, then wrap the stuffed jalapeno in prosciutto. Though it has a lot less fat than bacon, prosciutto boasts big pork flavour. And when it's baked, as it is here, it's nice and crispy, which eliminates the need to coat the pepper with bread crumbs.

Ingredients

- 4 oz fresh goat cheese
- 1 oz grated Parmigiano-Reggiano cheese
- 1/4 cup finely chopped scallion greens
- 2 tsp grated lemon zest
- 6 jalapeno peppers
- 3 oz (12 slices) prosciutto

1. Heat the oven to 450 F. Line a rimmed baking sheet with foil, then coat it with cooking spray.

2. In a medium bowl, combine the goat cheese, Parmigiano-Reggiano, scallion greens and lemon zest. Halve the jalapenos lengthwise and carefully remove the ribs and seeds (wear rubber gloves if necessary to protect your hands). Stuff each half with the cheese mixture, being sure to use all of the cheese mixture.

3. Wrap 1 slice of prosciutto around each stuffed jalapeno half, overlapping the ends of the prosciutto on the bottom of the jalapeno. Arrange the poppers on the prepared baking sheet, then bake on the oven's centre rack until the prosciutto is slightly crispy, about 15 minutes.

Fernandez fined for embellishment

We'll preface this by saying Sebastian Fernandez has been one of the many pleasant surprises for the upstart Vancouver Whitecaps this season.

Acquired on a one-year loan from Uruguay in February, the 24-year-old midfielder has added flare and a scoring touch to a young Whitecaps lineup that is as exhilarating to the fans as it is formidable to the opponents.

But on Thursday, the long arm of Major League Soccer's Disciplinary Committee levied punishment on Fernandez, fining him an undisclosed amount for embellishment from an incident late in the first half of Sunday's road victory over the Portland Timbers.

The league also posted a video of what happened. It's worthy of a cringe or two.

Fernandez gets tangled up with Timbers defender Pa Modou Kah, when Vancouver's player suddenly grabs his face with an expression of agony, staggers around for a second or two, and then hits the deck and proceeds to roll around.

Sebastian Fernandez GETTY IMAGES

Kah was infuriated with the antics, and he let Fernandez know about it, too. Timbers midfielder Diego Chara began smiling when Vancouver's player began his act.

A scrum ensued, involving a collection of Portland players and Vancouver's big boys like Gershon Koffie, Jay DeMerit and Andy O'Brien.

Fernandez was given a yellow card, as was Kah.

On Wednesday, Vancouver's first-year head coach Carl Robinson, who in the past has lauded Fernandez for his skill, condemned the behaviour of his player in this particular case.

Robinson told reporters that he spoke with Fernandez and his entire team about embellishment.

"I told him it's not acceptable, we don't accept that. I don't condone that, the club won't condone that and it was dealt with internally," Robinson told reporters. "It won't be happening again.

"It's not what I'm about as a head coach and it's not what the club is about. It's important they know that. It does happen but it's not going to happen with our club." CAM TUCKER/METRO

CFL

Lions lineman Fabien back from emotional time away rehabbing

Kirby Fabien had never been through anything like this before.

A first-round, seventh overall selection of the B.C. Lions in the 2012 CFL Draft, Fabien suffered a devastating injury to his left knee last July, ending his rookie season. It also disrupted significant progress he made on the offensive line.

"I was just starting to learn the game to go down like that ... it was tough," the 23-year-old Fabien said this week.

"It's a lot of emotions. You start off depressed ... and then you get over it. You start doing rehab and there's ups and downs in rehab. You feel good for a whole week and then feel terrible for a couple of days."

Fabien said it's the first significant injury of his career. He spent eight weeks on crutches and now uses a brace on his left knee, which he said is operating at about 90 per cent.

"It's physically there, but I've got to just gain the confidence back," he said.

"Not the movements, but just trusting it in full contact and just trusting it for a whole practice or a whole game. Sometimes I take a step and it just feels a little bit off. But my knee is solid. It's healthy so I should just trust it. After that kind of injury, sometimes you just don't trust yourself. But you have to realize it is healthy, everything's fine and just push it." Spurs of the moment

NBA Finals. Western Conference champions handle the Heat and the heat to take 1-0 series lead

Game 1

Spurs	Heat
110	95

Tim Duncan had 21 points and 10 rebounds, and the San Antonio Spurs beat the Miami Heat 110-95 on Thursday night in Game 1 of the NBA Finals inside a sweltering AT&T Center.

With an air conditioning failure making it feel like basketball in a sauna and causing LeBron James to battle cramps that knocked him out of the game's decisive stretch, the Spurs pulled away to win the opener of the first finals rematch since 1998.

Manu Ginobili had 16 points and 11 assists, and Tony Parker added 19 points and eight assists for the Spurs, who shot 59 per cent and improved to 6 for 6 in NBA Finals Game 1s.

James finished with 25 points but played only 33 minutes, and Miami was outscored 36-17 in the fourth quarter.

James has dealt with cramping issues several times in the past, including during the 2012 NBA Finals against Oklahoma City — in a game in Miami.

"We're used to having the hotter arena," Heat coach Erik Spoelstra said.

Spoelstra insisted that the Heat would not use the temperature as an excuse, and said James tried to return to the game shortly after the cramp knocked him out.

"I just looked at him and said, 'Don't even think about it. You can't even move,'" Spoelstra said.

Duncan said the heat was a significant factor in the game.

"I don't know what happened to LeBron, but I think all of us were feeling the heat," Duncan said. "We were all dehydrated." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MLB. Blue Jays swing Tigers by tail for sweep

Juan Francisco and Brett Lawrie hit consecutive home runs in the sixth inning off Justin Verlander, and the Toronto Blue Jays completed a three-game sweep of the Detroit Tigers with a 7-3 victory Thursday.

The AL East-leading Blue Jays have won 19 of 23, including sweeps of defending champion Boston, AL West-leading Oakland and AL Central-leading Detroit. J.A. Happ (5-2) allowed three runs and seven hits in 6 1/3 innings for Toronto.

Casey Janssen got the final out for his 10th save in 11 chances. He needed only one pitch to retire Nick Castellanos on a line drive to left with two on.

Melky Cabrera also homered for the Blue Jays.

Verlander (6-5) allowed six runs — five earned — and eight hits in seven innings. He walked four and struck out four. Toronto scored three runs each in the fourth and sixth. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Scorpio
Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
You may find it hard to admit you were wrong about something but you have no choice. If you have been found out for playing fast with the truth, admit it and promise not to let it happen again.

Sagittarius
Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
You should be making progress now and if you are not it can only be a matter of time. Make an effort to move up in the world and make sure others can see you're going places.

Capricorn
Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
Your views may be out of the ordinary, but no way should you change them. According to the planets they are closer to the truth than you realize, so keep searching.

Aquarius
Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
Seek out those who are different and don't be afraid to show them you're different too. With Uranus, your ruler, on excellent terms with the Sun anything out of the ordinary will work in your favour.

Pisces
Feb. 20 - March 20
Be more adventurous when it comes to your finances. What worked in the past may not work as well now, so look ahead and find new ways to boost your earning power and bank balance. SALLY BROMPTON
